MACKENZIE GORDON

name conjure up delightful memories to ed up thoroughly to "Mother o' Mine" Honolulu music-lovers of the enjoyable and Guy D'Hardelot's "Because," but hour of song given by the celebrated tenor at the Hawaiian Opera House last evening. Long will Gordon's exquisite voice in fancy ring in the hearts of his auditors of last evening when to 5:30 this afternoon. Mrs. Frear will the singer is in far distant lands. To say that Honolulu was pleased with cital next Monday evening just prior to last night's recital is putting it mildly. The audience was enthusiastic to the extreme and applauded the singer to the echo after every number, growing more and more enthusiastic as the pro> gram progressed. Mr. Gordon sang in his very best voice. He and his audience were on the highest plane of sympathetic accord and, notwithstanding the difficulty of giving a recital almost alone, he seemed to enjoy every number with his hearers.

It is safe to say that the equal of Mackenzie Gordon has never been heard in this city. Voice, art and temperament are his in generous measure, and whether he is sobbing through an exquisitely sad song, singing a stately Handel, or giving a humorous Irish ballad, his remarkable versatility makes each one admirably rendered. It is doubtful if any other singer could have sung so varied a program as acceptably. Gordon has a most magnetic presence, which places him instantly on the Can always be found in The HAWAIImost friendly terms with his audience. His sobs are a spontaneous burst of an extremely emotional and thoroughly artistic temperament and indicate the complete giving of himself to his art. Lucia Burnett was a surprise. She came almost unheralded, like an angel all of the news of the day can be found unawares, and acquitted herself in the exquisite Chopin numbers she gave at the piano in a manner that proved her far above the ordinary planist. Honolulu should hear more of Mrs. Burnett. She played with a delightful singing quality of tone, with splendid cable service in every issue. It is a execution; and interpreted her Chopin numbers in a manner which showed an clean, intelligent pager and you will intelligent comprehension and artistic expression. She was very generously applauded. Mrs. W. L. Whitney contributed not playing Mr. Gordon's accompaniments gracefully and with delightful tempera- and street cars. ment. In the most difficult songs she played with exceptional precision and was at all times in perfect sympathy with the singer. It would be difficult to find a more finished accompanist than Mrs. Whitney anywhere,

The audience was one of the most brilliant seen in the Opera House for many years. Society turned out in draught at Scotty's Royal Annex, Merforce to hear the distinguished singer, chant street.

and many beautiful gowns were noticed throughout the auditorium, Every seat in the house was occupied, both downstairs and up, and it was withal the largest and most representative audience of music lovers that ever greeted an artist in Honolulu.

Of the songs it was difficult to decide Mackenzie Gordon! Long will that the most popular. The audience warmall the others were almost equally appreciated. By special request Mr. Gordon sang three dainty songs at the end of the program, ending with "Annie Laurie," which concluded a thoroughly enjoyable evening. Owing to numerous requests Mr. Gordon will endeavor to give another rehis leaving for Hilo, as he will be unable to do so on his return.

ENRICHED THE PUBLISHER.

"The Call of the Wild," the best seller of all London's books, netted the author only $1500. He was well pleased when he received that sum for all his rights in the story, but his glee changed to grief and his views of life became more socialistic when his publisher's profits in the book reached six figures. He reaped his reward indirectly, however, as the result of that success, and incidentally learned to protect his interests with thorough commercial skill.
